A Tree....

Sandal Magna is a parish on the south-east edge of Wakefield, in West Yorkshire. I wonder whether anyone from here has been there! I did once a long time ago, but it is now on my list of places to go.

Why? You might ask. Well, it all has to do with a tree. And it began when the vicar of the parish, Rupert Martin, was pondering the lack of space for cremated remains in the churchyard. An area was identified and the idea came of a shape of a tree being created. Dan Jones, a sculptor in Doncaster, and their architect, Liz Ashmore, ran with the idea and produced a wonderful design. The branches extend out on either side of the trunk, and down the centre is a carving of the river of life, which has a series of roundels on it: the roundels are carved with the fruits. As The Vicar says: 'Every element of the biblical symbolism was present: the tree, the street, the river, the fruit, the leaves and even the throne, a seat that was commissioned from a furniture designer to fit into the curved root-ball at the base of the tree.'

Of course, this refers to the Book of Revelation 21: 1 – 2. (Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away, and the sea was no more. And I saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.) The ministry of the parish to the bereaved has been greatly enhanced. It has become a place of healing and pilgrimage.

In King's Sutton where the cemetery is the care of the parish Council, we do bury some cremated remains, but there are no visible memorials. And the last person to be buried in the churchyard died in 1902! In Charlton, the cemetery remains in the care of the Parish Church, and in recent years we have replaced the long, overgrown Leylandii with English Yew and White-beam. It is now a much more open space, with the War Memorial at the centre of the cross-shaped paths. People do tend the more recent graves and that is good to see. But I wonder if these are places of healing and pilgrimage. I hope the simple liturgy of burial or the burial of ashes is a moment of healing for the bereaved.

Meanwhile, when I can manage it I shall be off to West Yorkshire to see the Sandal Magna Tree for myself, and if anyone gets there before I do please take some pictures!

The King's Sutton War Memorials

- the story of those who served

Written as part of the commemoration of the centenary of the First World War, this book gives a fascinating view of the lives of King's Sutton men one hundred years ago, and will be of interest to anyone with King's Sutton connections as well as to descendants of all those who served during the Great War. The project started with the 157 men on the Church War Memorial and the names of those who died on the Village War Memorial. Many surnames are familiar to King's Sutton: many men were related - and some have relatives here today.

Twenty two of these men were killed, but the majority returned to the village to take up their lives again. The 1911 census and local parish registers give valuable information as to their families, place of birth, and occupation. Most of the military service records were either destroyed completely or badly burned during World War II, but where they do exist they were helpful. It was discovered that the men did not all come from the village. Some were from neighbouring villages: Charlton cum Newbottle, Bodicote, Aynho, Croughton and some from further afield but who had an obvious connection with the village. Where there are two possibilities, both have been included. I have been unable to identify Frank Taylor who is named on the village War Memorial. As well as the casualties of the Second World War, one casualty from Hong Kong in 1953 is included, as is Arthur Halestrap who lived here for many years.

The searches revealed and the book includes a number of other men connected with King's Sutton who were not listed on either memorial. The majority of these men were either killed in action or died of wounds. It is hoped that these names will be added to the village memorial during 2016. There were an additional six from 1914-18 and one from 1939-45 who were killed but who were already more appropriately commemorated elsewhere. In addition to those named on the church memorial seven more were found who served during 1914-18. The results of our research on all these men are included among these accounts.

GARDEN PARTY AT BELL HOUSE

It rained early in the morning...it rained at breakfast time....it rained at coffee time, at lunch time...and even at the start of the event at the Bell House! But, stiff upper lip and all that, everyone carried on regardless, and approximately 80 people came through the Italianate gardens to enjoy tea, sandwiches and cakes – even if they had to sit at tables set up in the shelter of the garage! So, many thanks to all those who came and supported this event in such inclement weather, and thanks to those who helped and baked! At the time of going to press, the sum of £605 was made for the church Restoration Appeal, and the sun came out briefly at 5.30pm as the gates closed....

To think about.....

“The tree which moves some to tears of joy is in the eyes of others only a green thing that stands in the way. Some see nature all ridicule and deformity... and some scarce see nature at all. But to the eyes of the man of imagination, nature is imagination itself.”

(William Blake)
